

Pediatric Rheumatic Diseases Research Lab

The Pediatric Rheumatic Disease Research Laboratory is housed in the Medical Research Building at the University of Saskatchewan.

Research interests include:

- Longitudinal population surveys of childhood rheumatic diseases
- High mobility group box 1 protein and its role in juvenile idiopathic arthritis
- The role of collagen in rheumatic disease
- The specificity of antinuclear antibodies in juvenile idiopathic arthritis
- Early origins of inflammation-mediated diseases